From
Fredrick Ephraim Mukabi,
Kenya School of Government,
P.O. Box 402-60100,
Embu.

Dear Sir,

RE: APPLICATION FOR THE POSITION OF CHIEF PRINCIPAL LECTURER II, REF. NO. CPLII/03/2024-25.

Having gone through the advertisement on the existing vacancy of Chief Principal Lecturer II in the School, I wish to express interest in holding this position. I am confident that I have the requisite knowledge, skills, experience and expertise you are looking for as per the Schools Career Guidelines as revised. I would therefore be an excellent addition to your team of highly resourceful members of the academic team in the School.

I am a 55-year-old Kenyan who has continuously served within the Kenyan public service for the last 29 years in different capacities, seven (9) of which were in management and leadership positions. Currently I am the Deputy Director, Learning and Development at Kenya School of Government, Embu Campus a position that I have held for the last five years now.

I hold a PhD in Business Administration (Leadership and Governance), a Master's in Business Administration (HRM) and a Bachelor's degree in Education (ARTS) from Moi, Kenyatta and Jomo Kenyatta (JKUAT) universities respectively and I do believe these qualifications form a sound knowledge and skills base that has enabled me to effectively execute my technical, managerial and leadership responsibilities in the various capacities that I have held in the School. While working, I have also attended and participated in various technical, management and leadership programs locally and internationally out of which I have gained immense experience and skills set suitable for the challenges that about with the new academic position. Through these capacity building initiatives and within my domain as a faculty member and leader, I have been able to mentor staff under my purview thus helping them excel in their respective capabilities.

In response to your persistent encouragement and promotion of research and scholarly within the School, I have in collaboration with my colleagues at the Embu Campus provided lead-authorship to two reviewed books that have since been published, namely 'Simplified Economics: A Handbook for Social Development Workers, (2020)' and 'Simplified Research Methods: A Handbook for Social Scientists, (2022)', the former having been officially launched at the Embu Campus while the latter is due for launch within the year. I have also co-authored a book chapter manuscript on 'Innovative De-Risking Models for Smallholder Agribusiness Financing in Kenya', for the yet to be published book from Embu Campus, 'Towards Food Security and Nutrition in Kenya: A Reconciliation of Ideas, Actions and Outcomes'.

In promoting research activities in the School, I have led teams in campus-wide research assignments and also written various research article manuscripts which have been published in varied peer reviewed journals globally. I have also endeavoured to promote best practices in the public service by writing various opinion articles on topical management and leadership themes Ministerial Magazines, including in our KSG Weekly Bulletin. I have also supervised tens of students both in Higher National Diploma, Diploma and Senior Management Courses in developing research proposals and research reports as their supervisor, a job that I continue to discharge despite my other responsibilities.

In promoting School's visibility as a research and innovation hub, I have also participated in various International Scientific Conferences hosted by various universities, National Polytechnics and other State Agencies locally as a presenter and a panellist. I have also represented the campus in various academic activities in universities and colleges locally while developing their respective curricular and various policy documents. This I have discharged with utmost diligence as an ambassador of the School.

In promoting the consultancy portfolio of the School, I have been a lead consultant in various consultancy assignments mounted by the Campus including those from the Northern Water Works Development Agency, Nyeri County Government Department of Public Service and Administration, Othaya-Mukurueni Water and Sanitation Company Limited, Meru National Polytechnic and Isiolo County Government Department of Public Service and Administration, Nyeri Water and Sanitation Company Limited among others.

In all these endeavors, I am confident that any additional responsibilities bestowed upon me in the new position of Chief Principal Lecturer II will be within my capabilities as I continue to raise the profile of the School as a leadership and management research institution of global standing. I therefore feel fit to hold this demanding position and look forward towards a positive feedback and subsequent appointment.

Yours faithfully,

Fredrick Ephraim Khaunya Mukabi, PhD.
