RESEARCH AND CONSULTANCY ASSIGNMENTS:

a. Consultant: Human Rights and the Big 4 Agenda-Promoting Human Rights in Development

The Big Four Agenda is a five-year development plan by the government of Kenya, anchored on four pillars: universal health care, affordable housing, food security and promotion of the manufacturing industry. In this respect I spearheaded a team at KSG in conjunction with the Kenya National Commission on Human Rights (KNCHR) to carry out a TNA, develop and roll out a programme for duty bearers. The training dubbed 'Human Rights and the Big Four Agenda - Promoting Human Rights in Development' saw both county and national government officers trained. The aim of the programme was to enable the duty bearers promote human dignity of individuals and communities by integrating economic, social and cultural rights in their policies, practices and decision making.

b. Conference Papers

Presented papers at local and International Conferences

c. Supervision of Students

I have supervised several students undertaking Diploma in Public Administration; and Senior Management Course at the Kenya School of Government, Nairobi.

d. Business Development

Successfully generated and coordinated business consultancies for the School internationally and locally (both with national and county governments) and specifically coordinated training, research and consultancy activities for: The National Government – Kenya; The 47 County Governments of Kenya; The Republic of South Sudan; Government of Liberia and; The United Republic of Tanzania and many others.

e. Health Systems Management Programme (Coordination, Stakeholder Engagement and Resource Mobilization)

I Coordinated the Health Systems Management Program (HSM) for the Ministry of Health, jointly run with AMREF, Kenya Medical Training College (KMTC) and Great Lakes University of Kisumu (GLUK). I am also the liason between the organization, donors (WHO, DANIDA, UNICEF) and other stakeholders in the HSS Program for a period of five (5) years.

I have participated in development of concept notes, concept papers, project proposal documents, researching funding opportunities for the Health Systems Management Programme and aligning the goals of the Kenya School of Government and the Ministry of Health with donor priorities and provided expertise on strategic resource identification and mobilization.

f. World Bank Institute Delivery Partners Development Program

In 2013, I attended World Bank Institute Delivery Partners Development Program in Washington DC which seeks to help scale-up the Greater Than Leadership (GTL) and Leadership 4 Results (L4R) programs offered by the World Bank Institute. The Delivery Partners Development Program (DPDP) has been designed to develop a global cadre of faculty (individuals and partner institutions) that are capable of delivering both the GTL and L4R program to WBI standards.

The GTL and L4R are collaborative leadership programs that are problem-based and team-focused. The objective of both programs is to enhance the capacity of change agents (public servants, private sector and civil society) to better identify the complexity of reform challenges. This is done by building and strengthening coalitions through the promotion of constructive engagement amongst different stakeholders as well as using modern implementation tools to accelerate change process. During this training, I had an opportunity to present a case study that was used to develop a net map of key stakeholders on the Free Maternal Health Care in Kenya.

g. First National Conference on Health Leadership, Management and Governance

I participated in the first national conference on Health Leadership, Management and Governance held at Intercontinental Hotel, Nairobi Kenya from 29 January – 1 February 2013 as a member of the National Organizing committee and also as a discussant on the role of the Kenya School of Government in capacity building to strengthen Health Systems. The theme of the conference was: “Towards Our Devolved Health System: Leading and Managing Change for Better Health”.
