

Ludeki Chweya, Ph.D.,
Kenya School of Government
P.O. Box 23030 - 00604,
Lower Kabete
NAIROBI
April 18, 2025

Director General
Kenya School of Government
P.O. Box 23030 - 00604,
Lower Kabete
NAIROBI

Dear

Re: Application for the Position of Professor Advert no. PROF/54/2024-25

I hereby submit my application for the vacancy at the position of Professor that featured in the internal Circular no KSG/HQS/ADM/3(38) of April 7, 2025.

I have risen progressively in the academic hierarchy from the position of Tutorial Fellow, through Assistant Lecturer, Lecturer, Senior Lecturer and the current position of Associate Professor to which I was appointed in 2019. I have in the course of my career lectured students at graduate and undergraduate levels, facilitated training programs for senior level public officials, supervised research students at Masters, Ph.D. and other levels, conducted research and widely published research findings and offered consultancy services to Governments and international organizations, mostly in the sphere of public sector leadership and Governance generally.

I have worked closely with faculty at the Kenya School of Government over the past decade to promote research, consultancy services, and capacity development programs that meet the needs and requirements of Kenyan and other public officials in Africa at various levels and in different fields of service delivery. The School is now a destination for national and international meeting for professional growth and development through exchange of experiences and acquisition of new knowledge and perspectives. We were able also to attract funding from development partners for staff development, training of public officials, and curriculum development.

I have therefore gained wide insights in effective development of learning content and delivery of methodologies from practical work in development of curricula and course materials for both university level learners and public service practitioners attending continuous skills development programs. The search for new knowledge and development of critical and innovative mindsets on the part of learners has proved to be an important pedagogical consideration, particularly in respect of both practicing and aspiring public service officials.

I have had a unique opportunity to realize a more complete appreciation of societal problems and possible remedies through a combination of academic perspectives and practical experience in governance, gained from my appointment and service in some strategic leadership positions in Government institutions such as Permanent Secretary in the Office of the Vice President and Ministry of Home Affairs, Director General and Chief Executive Officer at the Kenya School of Government – a state corporation, and membership in numerous Government committees such as the National Dialogue and Reconciliation Committee following the 2008 post-election conflict, the National Security Advisory Committee, and as chair of the Governance Justice Law & Order Budget Sector. While my academic background has greatly assisted me in spearheading successful governance transformation in institutions that I was appointed to lead, the practical experience gained from headship of these institutions has in turn broadened my academic perspectives, providing a deeper appreciation of the intricacies of society and the workings of the complex machinery of Government far beyond perspectives gained from scholarship alone.

I have had opportunity in the past to serve in elective international positions as President of the African Management Development Institutes Network (AMDIN) and as Vice President (Africa Region) for the International Association of Schools and Institutes of Administration (IASIA). These roles have been a source of tremendous lessons on comparative organization and delivery of learning and training programs in African countries and around the world, quite apart from the numerous international and regional workshops I have attended on a variety of themes within leadership and governance field.

I look forward to making a worthy contribution towards advancement of the work that the School is undertaking to enhance the performance of the Public Service from the prospective position of Professor.

Please find the attached curriculum vitae and other testimonials in support of this application.

Yours Sincerely,

Prof. Ludeki Chweya, Ph.D., CBS
Associate Professor